--ABSTRACT

A method for forwarding a call, in which a first number, which is entered on a first telecommunications terminal and is assigned to a second terminal, is used to establish a connection to the second terminal and the call remains unanswered in the second terminal is provided. The method allows the A-subscriber to reach a person by telephone who is assigned to the B-subscriber by triggering the transmission of a message from the first terminal to the automatic telecommunications service to determine an alternative number. The service then determines a second number of a third terminal, using an electronically stored assignment regulation from a directory, and the second number is used to establish a connection between the first and the third terminals. --
